WELCOME

Meet Black-eyed Sue. This gal may be Maryland's state flower, but Sue is like any other girl about to enter Maryland U. as a new student. She has the same clothing lists, revised and edited by a practical mother, a financially skeptical father, and a wise college friend. She has the same stomach pangs as she thinks of sorority rushing, 8:00 classes, and Saturday night dates. In short, Sue has the same problems that you, as a new student will have.

DORM LIFE

Her first big concern is where and how she will live. The dorm assigned to Sue is very similar to the other four women's dorms on campus: it houses about 140 girls; has a spacious lobby; contains a basement equipped with laundering facilities, public phones, and candy and fruit juice machines. There is a large rec room where Sue can entertain visitors with a ping-pong game

TV show, or piano jam-session.

Sue's room is on the second floor, so with a shout of, "Man on second!", Sue and her folks proceed to unload pillow, bed-clothes, blankets, spread, rugs, curtains, and clothes from the car and start the long haul upstairs. An hour later the weary workers push the bed into place, plug the radio and alarm clock (into a newly acquired extension cord), and collapse on Sue's roommate's bed to survey the four walls that Sue will call home during the coming year.

As Sue's parents are leaving, they meet the housemother who explains the dorm rules: quiet hours for study, Monday night dorm meetings, mealtime, and the dorm judicial board. After a final farewell to her parents, Sue dashes upstairs to await her roommate.

DAYDODGERS

Over half of Sue's freshmen classmates will be Daydodgers and live at home. They may commute to the University by public transportation, in their own cars, or a car pool. They will find a desk at registration set up to help them find rides if they haven't been successful yet in finding transportation. They may put a lock on one of the lockers in the Education or BPA building to keep books or a lunch. Daydodgers may bring their lunch and eat in the Rec Hall or the Dairy. Of course they may buy lunch in the dining hall cafeteria, rec hall, dairy or the drugstore if they wish.

CLOTHES AND SOCIAL LIFE

Sue begins the long process of unpacking with that horrible feeling of something forgotten. As she hangs up skirts and folds sweaters, Sue's mind wanders to the fall football games and informal fraternity parties. Her green formal brings thoughts of the Pan-hel pledge dance, homecoming week-end, fraternity formals, and Rossborough week-end. Jeans and sweatshirts for picnics at Greenbelt are stashed away; then as Sue places saddles, loafers, and heels into her shoe bag, she remembers the forgotten: RAINWEAR!! Where are the boots, slicker, and umbrella? Quick, a note to mother! Sue finishes her unpacking by hanging her prized possession, THE suit, in her closet. Sue may wear The Suit to basketball games, boxing matches, Convocation exercises, the movies, church, and all in-between occasions that don't require dressy clothes or jeans.

With a usual frown, Sue takes out the envelope with her monthly

allowance
in it. .
Whether it will be sufficient
for shampoo,
dry-cleaning,
laundry,
cosmetics,
club dues,

church collection, stamps, snacks, cigarettes, and cokes will be up to Sue and her father.

ACADEMIC LIFE

So Sue sits and waits. Her companion for the year should be moving in soon and together there will be registration, mail from home, their personal conference with the Dean of Women, Saturday classes, phone calls from the current man, study for finals, and all the other activities that will make the coming year one that Black-eyed Sue will never forget.

AWS OFFICERS

You will meet the AWS officers upon your arrival at Maryland and get to know them through out the year:

President - Mary Jo Turner
Vice-President - Joy Covert
Secretary - Wanda Mehring
Treasurer - Maureen Quinn Judicial Board Chairman -
Aileen Zuriff
Academic Board Chairman -
